We are pleased to invite you to attend the Urine Sediment Course, specifically designed for trainees pursuing their specialization in nephrology, as well as other interested medical professionals. The course provides comprehensive knowledge and skills in the evaluation of urine sediments, an essential component of nephrology diagnostics.

Understanding urine sediment analysis requires not only familiarity with the methodology but also a solid foundation of background knowledge encompassing patient information, clinical context, and nephrology. Hence, this course covers not only the theory and techniques of urine sample collection and examination but also delves into the most prevalent clinical nephrological conditions.

This course has been developed and organized in collaboration with Dr. Fogazzi, a leading expert in the field. Dr. Fogazzi's extensive research on urine sediment has yielded significant insights into the understanding of nephrological urine examination. He has authored a seminal textbook on urine sediment serving as a valuable standard reference.

The course structure entails a dynamic combination of theoretical and practical components. Each theoretical unit is followed by a practical unit, where every participant will have the opportunity to individually examine urine sediments using their own microscope. This hands-on experience will allow you to apply your knowledge and skills in a real-world setting. The same urine sediments will then be collectively analyzed in the group using video microscopy, with expert guidance from Dr. Fogazzi.
